AUTISM CANADA

DON'T JUST NOTICE ME.
INCLUDE ME.

Integrated PSA Awareness Campaign
#MakeRoom

Presented By: Yumna EL Hendi
GRAF 161 – Strategic Thinking
Project 3 – PSA Advertising Campaign

The Cause / Research

Awareness of autism has increased, but awareness alone does not always lead to meaningful inclusion.

Autistic people may still experience exclusion at school, work, social activities and within their communities.

Our campaign encourages people to move beyond simply recognizing autism and take small actions that create belonging and inclusion.

Client

- Autism Canada

Key Message

- Awareness sees people.
Acceptance includes them.

Campaign Idea

- Don't just notice me. Include me.

Creative Brief

Current attitude	People may recognize autism and support autism awareness but may not understand what meaningful inclusion looks like in everyday situations.
Cause / Problem	Awareness of autism does not always translate into meaningful acceptance and inclusion.
Campaign objective	Encourage Canadians to move from passive awareness to active acceptance and inclusion.
Think / Feel / Do	Think: Being aware isn't enough. Feel: Empathy and responsibility. Do: Make intentional efforts to include neurodivergent people.
Single-minded proposition USP	Autism Canada says acceptance goes beyond recognition and involves creating environments where Autistic and neurodivergent people are valued, supported and included. Its work includes education, advocacy, resources and support programs across Canada.
Support	Don't just notice me. Include me
Tone and manner	Human, respectful, inclusive, emotional and empowering—not pitying or clinical.
Target Audience	Primary Audience Students and young adults regularly interact with neurodivergent people at school, university, work and in social settings. Secondary Audience Educators, employers, coworkers, parents and community members. Audience Insight "I may understand what autism is, but I might not realize when someone is being left out."
Desired Change	We want people to ask: "What can I do to make this person feel included?"

Final Campaign Concept

DON'T JUST NOTICE ME. INCLUDE ME.

Our campaign focuses on a simple difference:

AWARENESS SEES.

ACCEPTANCE INCLUDES.

The visual concept shows ordinary situations where an Autistic person may be physically present but not meaningfully included.

Rather than using pity or negative stereotypes, the campaign focuses on a simple action:

MAKE ROOM.

Whether at school, work or socially, inclusion can begin with an invitation, conversation or small change.

YOU SEE ME.
BUT DO YOU
INCLUDE ME?

Awareness is knowing autism exists.
Acceptance is making room.

Don't just notice me.
Include me.
